

Karen Kincaid.

Having started my career in academia as a plant scientist, it wasn't many years before I worked out that people were more interesting than plants! As a result, and after a short (ish) trip round the world and a move to Cambridge, I embarked on a career change into the field of Human resources and Organisational development. I've held various roles within Medical services and Generalist HR and more latterly Business Partner roles in Learning and Development and Organisational Development in a shared services NHS